Report Highlights:

This report provides a list of Indian law firms offering legal assistance in commercial matters. This list is neither exhaustive nor does it constitute an endorsement of any particular firm. The U.S. Department of Agriculture does not endorse nor makes any guarantee on the reliability or suitability of services offered by these firms. Those who wish to retain legal counsel in India are encouraged to check references.

General Information:

This report provides a list of Indian law firms offering legal assistance in commercial matters. While the U.S. Department of Agriculture works to promote food and agricultural trade with India, the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service office in New Delhi does not have the jurisdiction to arbitrate commercial disputes or assume a fiduciary role in private transactions. As all commercial activities in India are subject to Indian law, U.S. companies are encouraged to seek local counsel as needed.

This list is neither exhaustive nor does it constitute an endorsement of any particular firm. The U.S. Department of Agriculture does not endorse nor makes any guarantee of performance on the reliability or suitability of services offered by these firms. Those who wish to retain legal counsel in India are encouraged to check references.
